THE National Training and Productivity Centre has trained about 600 practitioners, consultants, trainers, instructors and environmental officers in green productivity and environmental management.

This was shared by Fiji National University chancellor Ikbal Jannif at the opening of the Asian Productivity Organization's (APO) training course on green productivity in Nadi this week.

"Our aim is to train as many as possible to the extent that we have also sent participants from Fiji to be trained overseas in our member countries under the APO umbrella," he said.

Mr Jannif said while Fiji was making good progress with meeting internationally recognised health, safety and environment standards, more needed to be done.
