BANGKOK, 8 June 2016 (NNT) - Thailand’s industrial sector has hosted this year’s Eco-Products International Fair to support the development of green industries and promote environmental awareness among consumers.

The fair was jointly organized by the Federation of Thai Industries, Asian Productivity Organization and the Thailand Productivity Institute. It features exhibitions of environmentally friendly products, services and innovations. Products on display consist of auto parts and accessories, logistics equipment, construction materials, textiles, food and dairy products, electrical appliances, furniture, and IT gadgets from over 200 vendors.

The event provides an opportunity for manufacturers and suppliers to connect with buyers both domestic and abroad. The fair has also scheduled seminars on environmental conservation and energy efficiency for students. The Eco-Products International Fair is being held from June 8-11 at the Bangkok International Trade and Exhibition Centre (BITEC).

Deputy Prime Minister ACM Prajin Juntong and Industry Minister Atchaka Sibunruang presided over the opening ceremony. The Deputy Prime Minister spoke about the country's efforts to develop green industries. These industries would promote economic and social sustainability, as well as further the country's goal of reducing carbon emissions by 6-20% by the year 2020.
